John Updike's first collection of verse since his Collected Poems, 1953-1993 brings together fifty-eight poems, three of them of considerable length. The four sections take up, in order: America, its cities and airplanes; the poet's life, his childhood, birthdays, and ailments; foreign travel, to Europe and the tropics; and, beginning with the long 'Song of Myself,' daily life, its furniture and consolations. There is little of the light verse with which Mr. Updike began his writing career nearly fifty years ago, but a light touch can be felt in his nimble manipulation of the ghosts of metric order, in his caressing of the living textures of things, and in his reluctance to wave goodbye to it all. PUBLISHER ANNOTATION, c2005.

As a golfer for almost 40 years, Updike has written frequently about his 'impassioned but imperfect devotion' to the game. And now he brings together his writings culled from a variety of sources--The New Yorker, Golf Digest, his own fiction--which knowingly cover everything from the peculiar charms of bad golf and the satisfactions of an essentially losing struggle to the camaraderie of good golf and the perils of its present boom. There are 30 pieces in all--and all have the lilt of a love song and the crispness of a firm chip stiff to the pin. 4 drawings. Large first printing (A). Major advertising. Author tour. Previous: AFTERLIFE AND OTHER STORIES; BRAZIL; et al. BRODART CO., c1996.
